June 7 Sunday

Sunny

There is going to be a running test on Monday. It was Sunday today, so I woke up at 7:00 to practice my running skills. I got up quickly, and I finished my breakfast within 20 minutes. The riverside was a good place to go. As soon as I arrived at the riverside, I started to practice my running skills.

At the beginning of the running, it didn't work very well for me. My shoes loosened, and they made me nearly fall. The moment I tightened the shoelaces, I began to feel good and was ready for a hard drill. I spent half of the day practicing my running skills. As I improved my running skills, I felt very happy. I believed if someone worked really hard on one thing, he or she would be sure to embrace a happy ending. After all, running makes me feel good because it is my favorite sport. I really enjoy running by the riverside, and feel air flowing past me. That makes me feel refreshed.

Based on the diary in guiding question 5, let's write a passage about our own experience with a specific sport. Before we start, let's discuss what elements should be included and make a checklist.

Checklist (for reference):

1.	What's your experience?	2.	Why is the experience impressive?	3.	What's your problem with it?
4.	How did you solve your problem?	5.	How did it work out for you?	6.	Participles as adverbials

➤ Question 6: Write a diary about your experience of a specific sport according to the checklist we discussed. Then exchange your works with your desk mate, and help correct each other grammatical mistakes. And after that, you are invited to read out your desk mate's works.

Learning how to swim is one of my most unforgettable experiences with sports. Growing up with a deep fear of water, I always chose not to visit places like swimming pools. However, faced with such a hot weather, I was persuaded to go swimming by my friends. Bathed in deep water, I had no choice but to walk very slowly. Then, out of a sudden, I slipped. Although falling in water, I found it not frightening to be drowned in the pool because it was not very deep. Then I came to realize that I should not be afraid of water. Remembering this makes me want to conquer water all the more. Encouraged by my friends, I learnt how to float on water. In the end, knowing the joy of playing with water, I grew to be fond of swimming.
